

Bilingual Personality Disorder

---

This may be the first time you hear about this made-up disorder but it actually isn't so far from the truth. As recent studies show, the language you speak has more effects on you than you realize. According to the studies, the language a person speaks affects their cognition, behavior, emotions, and hence their personality.

This shouldn't come as a surprise since we already know that different regions of the brain become more active depending on the activity. The structure, information, and especially the culture of languages vary substantially and the language a person speaks is an essential element of daily life.

One language, one person.
